The Provenance of Nuclear Radioactivity & Radiations and its Deep Developmental Impact on the Mankind

Geeta Sakhuja

Assistant Professor, Department of Physics, Hans Raj Mahila Maha Vidyalaya College, Jalandhar, Punjab, India

ABSTRACT: This assessment has an important consideration for the nuclear energy upon the creation of the radioactivity being generated and mobilized through various Energy Agency. The entire system related to human health issues within the broadest sense, encompasses man and his world, comprising both animate and inanimate components.

This paper examines the empirical evidence incorporated with human-made nuclear radioactivity from nuclear energy especially while maintaining the viability of radioactive mechanisms which may cause the uncontrolled highly dangerous harmful effects of radionuclides in the human body health as a result the Radiation can even damage the DNA in the cells of people exposed to it. This, in turn the paradigm for the health risks of nuclear power at this moment and in the future because it is the DNA that passes on instructions for growth and development to the next generation.

KEYWORDS: Radioactive Mechanisms, Ionizing Radiation, Atoms, Alpha, Beta, and Gamma Radiation.

Abstract

Wireless communication systems are more prone to errors during transmission of messages. But reliable and efficient data transmission is a main topic of interest. Since long time, researchers are working for various error detection and correction (EDAC) technique for error free data transmission. This paper is an attempt to provide basic information about various error detection and correction schemes developed. There are mainly two types of EDAC techniques namely Automatic repeat request (ARQ) and Forward error correction (FEC). Stop & wait ARQ and Continuous ARQ have been discussed in this paper. Further, this paper provides basic information about different types of block codes namely cyclic redundancy check codes (CRC) and Hamming codes. Convolutional code has also been discussed.

Keywords: EDAC, ARQ, FEC, CRC

1. Introduction

Growth in technology has led to the demand of error free signals. Today's communication system consists of both wired and wireless communication [1]. Wireless communication networks are more sensitive to bit errors than wired communication systems. Due to advancement in data transmission techniques, chances of error introduction and noise have also increased. Received data is more likely to be damaged by noisy channels used for

ABSTRACT: The emergence of Information Technology sector in mid-1990s has unveiled a potential employment opportunity for women in this organized sector congenially befitting their job environment and offering, in principle, least gender discrimination. This paper attempts to analyze the issues of opportunities and constraints the women employees face in the Information Technology sector in India. IT sector, through its employment, contributes substantially to women empowerment. Its employment potentiality provides inspiration to female students to take up technical and professional courses with an eye to the job market. Most reviews reveal that, notwithstanding overall satisfactory gender neutral pursuit by this sector, an optimal level of gender inclusivity is still to be achieved, especially to the senior level. Moreover, this sector requires to be extra-careful in doing away with the prevailing maladies such as 'Feminization', 'Glass ceiling' etc. The theoretical aspect of individualization in the workplace is palpable but at the

Prof., PG Dept. Of Comp. Sc. &amp; IT, Hansraj Mahila Maha Vidyalaya Jalandhar, India. AbstractWith tremendous increase of number of users on internet, Online security has become a very important issue. Whether it is information related to an organization or an individual, if stolen it can lead to serious financial losses. The typical validation method used on the Internet is a single-factor authentication, where users supply a username and password. This approach has significant drawbacks, particularly as cyber criminals become more organized and adept. This idea of using Multi-Factor Authentication has been introduced in the world of internet to reduce the security of network and make it difficult for the attackers to crack users. In this mechanism, users are required to provide some extra information along with their login ID and password. Most popular in this category are One-Time Passwords that are generated randomly and valid only for single login and even for short duration of time. In this paper review of various login authentication techniques has been performed, discussing pros and cons through which security of each can be compared. Keywords One Time Password (OTP), 2-factor authentication, Short Message Service (SMS), Time based One Time Password (TOTP), Image based Authentication (IBA), Attack, Trojan IntroductionDuring a login process, an authentication factor is a requirement that is designed to verify the identity of an authorized user. In login security there are three categories of authentication factors which are typically used to verify identity: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Something that is known only by the user, such as a password or PIN</li> <li>Something that only the user possesses, such as a smartphone, smartcard, USB token, or other hardware key</li> <li>Something that is physically unique to the user such as a fingerprint or iris scan</li> </ul> Each category covers a range of potential requirements that can be used to verify identity and substantiate access to websites, applications, networks, systems, and other types of secured services. They can also be used electronically to approve transactions, sign or approve documents, grant access rights to others, or establish a chain of administrative requiring the user to verify identity through a separate method that is often inaccessible to attackers. One-Time PasswordA One-Time Password (OTP) is a password or code which is valid only for one login session or transaction on a computer system or any digital device. OTPs were introduced just to avoid the shortcomings that are associated with static passwords. Even they are valid for a small period of time and they automatically expires after the given time span. The most important advantage of OTPs, in contrast to static passwords, is that they are not vulnerable to replay attacks. It means that a potential intruder or attacker who manages to record an OTP that was already used by a user to login into the service will not be able to reuse it since it will be no longer valid. Also, OTPs are very difficult for humans to memorize. Another advantage is that a single OTP code cannot be used to login on multiple systems. Many Techniques have been introduced to generate and deliver these one-time passwords and most of them are Time-based One Time Password. |
